

International conference
The right to access for persons with disabilities:
current state and development prospects

The right to access has derived from the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and developed in EU law and national legislations. The issue is widely discussed in international literature. The conference aims to present research conducted on accessibility for people with disabilities.

The scope of the conference: access law for persons with disabilities under international law, EU law, Polish law and the law of other selected European countries, taking into account such research areas as constitutional law, human rights, administrative law and particular rights of persons with disabilities (e.g. access law in education, employment, health care, culture, etc.).
